Challenge your students to write a story using at least ten words from the Latin root 'quot'. Will your class have a 'quorum' of authors reach the 'quota'?

If your students are learning or know any Latin-based languages invite them to search for more words related to 'quot' or 'quotiens' in those languages.

Have students look up the word meanings and list job titles of people who could use that term as part of their work.

Invite students to create mini posters explaining how the Latin root of 'quotient' could help math students with division.
